starlings

the sea opened its avenue just now pearl-throated I they call mother mother sweet the sun-in to walk up into it and the starlings have come to peck the grass round us the young are screaming for the bread that is right at their feet